2 – BUSINESS ENVIRONMENT

BACKGROUND

The UK has a business environment considered by many to be one of the worlds most sophisticated. It has a supportive regulatory structure, good governance, strong government and world-class research facilities: as such, it is an attractive proposition for businesses of all sizes.

The UK is one of the major global economies, although GDP growth has stalled in 2022. The UK ranked as the sixth largest global economy based on 2021 GDP figures published by the World Bank.

Following Brexit, there has been a transition in the UK’s relationship with the EU. The UK-EU trade and co-operation agreement was signed 30 December 2020 and came into force on 1 May 2021. More recently, the Windsor Framework has simplified trade arrangements between GB, NI and the EU. It introduces green and red lanes for the movement of goods, based on a trusted trader scheme.

The UK has also signed a deal that should see it becoming the first European country to join The Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership (CPTPP) in 2023. The CPTPP eases trade between 11 Asia and Pacific members and reduces tariffs. While the initial impact on the UK’s economy is expected to be modest, the government has stressed that it is looking at the future potential of the markets concerned.

The UK has actively participated in the global discussions around climate change, and has set ambitious emission reductions milestones for 2030 and 2037 as part of the government’s plan for achieving net zero by 2050. In the last three decades, the UK has already almost halved its emissions: in 2020, the UK received 43% of its electricity from renewable sources. The Powering up Britain policy published in March 2023 provides details of government renewable investment priorities and grants.

Economic sanctions imposed on Russia following the invasion of Ukraine on 24 February 2022, and the backlash in terms of inflated gas and oil prices and disruptions to supply chains across the world have contributed to an inflation rate of nearly 9%. The Consumer Prices Index rose by 8.7% in the 12 months to May 2023.

Current changes to company law and the evolution of Companies House into more of a regulatory type organisation have been designed to strengthen AML procedures and create greater transparency regarding company information which should provide more reassurance to potential investors (see comments regarding registration requirements for private companies for more detail). It is important that businesses considering investment in the UK are informed of the latest government requirements concerning company formations, taxation and company filing requirements. Companies also need to be aware of corporate governance requirements, particularly ESG (Environmental, Social and Governance) considerations.

GEOGRAPHY
The United Kingdom (UK) comprises Great Britain (England, Wales and Scotland) and Northern Ireland. It occupies an area of approximately 243 square kilometres.

POPULATION
The UK population was estimated as 67.1 million people in mid-2020: this figure includes some of the impact on the population from COVID-19. It is a gradually aging population — in mid-2020 those aged 85 years and older made up 2.5% of the population. By mid-2045 it is projected that this age group will make up 4.3% of the total UK population.

A substantial proportion of the population lives in cities, the largest of which are London, Birmingham, Manchester, Glasgow, Newcastle and Sheffield. The older population make up higher proportions of the population in rural and coastal areas than urban areas.

LANGUAGE AND ETHNICITY
The official language is English but over 300 languages are spoken across the country. In London, 40 per cent of residents identify themselves as belonging to a minority ethnic group, according to the 2011 Census undertaken by the Office for National Statistics.

TRANSPORT
The UK’s rail and road network runs mainly north-south. High speed rail networks enable journey times between London and Birmingham of 90 minutes and London to Manchester of just over two hours. London is a major hub for the rail network. Birmingham, Leeds, Manchester, Glasgow, Bristol and Reading are also major interchanges.

Motorways across the UK allow speeds of up to 70 mph. Vehicles are driven on the left. Major ports include Port of Immingham (east coast); Port of London; Port of Southampton (south coast); Port of Liverpool (west coast) and Port of Milford Haven (Wales).

In 2020, the government consulted on proposals to create up to ten Freeport’s across the UK. A UK Freeport is a geographical area with a diameter up to 45km which is closely linked to a sea port, airport or rail port. They are allowed to import goods temporarily without the payment of tariffs, excise duties and other taxes before the goods are shipped on. The port areas also benefit from tax breaks to encourage construction, private

The channel tunnel (31.5 miles long, of which 23.5 miles is below sea level)\textsuperscript{21} links the UK with France. Journey times via the Eurostar train service from London to Paris are 2 hours 16 minutes and between London and Brussels 2 hours 1 minute\textsuperscript{22}.

The UK is well served by airports. London Heathrow Airport is the largest and is one of the busiest Airports in the world, but London is also served by London City Airport, Gatwick Airport, Luton Airport, Stansted Airport, Southend Airport, Manston (Kent International) and Thames Estuary airport\textsuperscript{23}. Significant regional airports include Manchester Airport, Birmingham Airport, Liverpool Airport, Bristol Airport, Glasgow International Airport, Leeds Bradford, Edinburgh and Newcastle\textsuperscript{24}.

TELE-COMMUNICATIONS

There are four major mobile networks in the UK (EE, Three, o2 and Vodafone). All have launched 5G services, although access is not available in every city\textsuperscript{25}. Ofcom, the government telecommunications regulator provides information on availability of services in a particular area with its checker\textsuperscript{26}.

THE ECONOMY

CURRENCY

The currency is pounds sterling (GBP). The interest rate is set by the Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) of the Bank of England, the UK’s central bank. Dates for MPC announcements on the Bank Rate are published on the Bank of England website.

GROSS DOMESTIC PRODUCT

GDP in 2022 is estimated to have increased by 4.1%\textsuperscript{27} (there was a 7.6% increase in 2021).

EMPLOYMENT

The UK employment rate for January to March 2023 was estimated at 75.9%.\textsuperscript{28}

SOURCES OF FINANCE

BANKS AND BUILDING SOCIETIES

Deposit-taking institutions may be broadly divided into two sectors: banks and building societies. Both sectors are currently regulated by the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA). This regulatory organisation is an independent, non-governmental body.

The main institutions within the British banking system are the Bank of England, retail banks, investment banks and overseas banks.

The Bank of England is the UK’s central bank and is responsible for setting the UK’s official interest rate and for maintaining a stable and efficient monetary policy and framework.

Although independent from the government, it remains the government’s banker and chief banker to the banking industry generally.

The UK retail banking market is dominated by a few large retail banks, most notably HSBC, Royal Bank of Scotland Group (includes NatWest), Lloyds Banking Group, Barclays, and Santander. Retail banks offer a wide variety of financial services to both companies and individuals.

Investment banks manage investment portfolios and corporate finance on behalf of their clients, most of whom are corporate companies.

Many overseas banks have subsidiary operations in the UK which offer retail banking services. However, these tend to be niche operations and generally do not provide comprehensive geographic or service coverage.

The British Business Bank is a UK Government-owned, independently run development bank that encourages diversity and competition in both equity investment markets and debt finance markets. Its focus is towards making finance markets work better for smaller UK businesses. It does this by working with new market entrants and supporting the growth of alternative lenders and committing capital to equity programmes investing in large-scale, private sector managed funds or funds providing later stage capital, and alongside business angels and other early-stage equity investors.

FINANCING OPTIONS
There are many sources of finance for businesses and choosing the right finance is an important decision.

One of the key factors in determining the best source(s) of finance will be the stage of development of the business so far. For a start-up business, finance borrowed from or invested by family and friends may be sufficient to get the business started, but more substantial funds will be needed later as the business grows. For more established businesses, there may be a range of finance options, either debt-based or equity-based (or a combination of both).

DEBT FINANCE
Banks are a traditional source of debt finance, but have always been and continue to remain, risk-adverse. If you have some security to offer, it will make getting a bank loan easier, but still not certain. A clear and concise business plan will help as will a track record of success and a good credit history.

The UK debt market is undergoing change due to the entry and growth of alternative finance providers. However, the term ‘alternative finance’ leads to significant confusion owing to the range of products, services and platforms that fall under this umbrella term. The term is mainly used in reference to the large number of internet-based platforms on which borrowing and lending takes place between private individuals and businesses. The alternative finance market is less regulated and has seen new entrants flourish due to the growth in the digital economy.

Challenger banks are sometimes confused with alternative finance providers, owing to their size and distribution system used, as many of these newer banks have an online digital presence rather than a physical one. These lenders are relatively small retail banks and have been set up with the intention of competing for business with the large, long-established national banks. However, there is a significant difference between the challenger banks and alternative finance as the challenger banks have to comply with the same rules and regulations as traditional banks, and your money will still be protected under the Financial Services Compensation Scheme. In order to be defined as a bank, the company must be authorised to accept retail deposits by the UK financial regulator, the Prudential Regulation Authority (PRA).

Some challenger banks were created following divestment from larger banking groups, others are smaller subsidiaries of larger banking or retail groups, a wind-down of a failed large bank or a new Fintech based platform. Crucially, these new banks still rely on customer deposits to build their balance sheets and lend money to people. Some better-known examples include Clydesdale and Yorkshire Bank Group (CYBG)/Virgin Money, Metro Bank, Tesco Bank, Aldermore/Abacus bank, Charter Savings Bank, Shawbrook and Atom Bank, but there are many others.

Asset based lending (ABL) is often provided by specialised companies (including challenger banks) and can be a source of funds for capital equipment and/or debt factoring facilities.

Asset finance includes leasing and higher-purchase and is used to obtain the use of equipment, without acquiring or to spread the cost. Finance is secured fully or partly on the asset being financed. A lease is where the finance company buys and owns the equipment, which is then rented to the lessee for an agreed term and fee, whereas in a hire purchase a business wants to own the equipment but spreads the capital and interest payments over a predetermined period. Asset finance is provided by specialist providers, but can be provided indirectly through the equipment suppliers and brokers.

A more recent option for some larger companies may be to issue corporate bonds. These are usually long-term debt instruments issued directly by the company and these can be listed on stock exchanges and may be traded. However, this market is still in its infancy and is not generally available for any but the larger well-known businesses.

There are many variations of these basic sources of finance and you should seek advice from someone with experience to gain a full understanding of the advantages and disadvantages of each type.

EQUITY FINANCE

Equity finance can be raised from a range of different providers. The main providers are the venture capital/private equity firms and business angels.

Larger businesses can also seek to raise equity on a public market, such as such as the Main Market of the London Stock Exchange (LSE), Euronext NV or an exchange-regulated market, such as AIM (the LSE’s Alternative Investment Market) and the Aquis Stock Exchange. These equity markets provide the means of raising capital from the public for UK and international companies through equity, debt and depository receipt issues.

The UK is home to Europe’s largest share market and the attraction of London as a venue for the listing and trading of shares in companies of all types has established it as one of the leading equities markets in the world. Overseas companies are actively encouraged to utilise the UK equity markets to raise capital in increasingly global equities markets. UK advisers and investors are also active on many other European exchanges.
As with debt finance, there are many variations within the equity markets and you will need to seek advice from someone with relevant experience to gain a full understanding of the advantages and disadvantages of each.

VENTURE CAPITAL/PRIVATE EQUITY
The UK has a strong venture capital/private equity market – the equity and debt financing of unquoted companies from company start-up to expansion, along with management buyouts and buy-ins of established companies. The industry invests in every sector of the economy and across all regions of the country and worldwide.

ACCELERATORS/INCUBATORS
Accelerators/incubators are companies or organisations that help start-ups develop. They are similar to each other so there is often a crossover in services provided such as financial and technical support, management training and coaching or office space with the intent of creating an early-stage community. The difference between the two is that most incubators charge rent or fees for physical space and support, whereas some accelerators will provide services but will take a small amount of equity. They do this with the aim of identifying ‘support networks’ that help to commercialise and develop start-ups, often with the ultimate goal of finding additional investors.

Accelerators/incubators are often sponsored and supported by private companies, municipal entities and public institutions, such as colleges and universities, and can be used as a catalyst tool for either regional or national economic development.

BUSINESS ANGELS
Angel investors are usually wealthy individuals who provide their own money for start-up or early-stage companies in exchange for equity and/or convertible debt. They sometimes work together with other angel investors or with other finance providers.

CROWDFUNDING
Smaller companies are increasingly turning to equity crowdfunding to raise capital, primarily for early-stage finance needs but increasingly for development capital as well. This can be a means to connect companies with many hundreds or thousands of potential investors and can be a viable alternative to angel or venture capital finance.

PEER-TO-PEER LENDING
These are in the main internet-based platforms where lenders are matched with borrowers. Peer-to-peer (P2P) loan sizes range from a few thousand to several millions of pounds and have set criteria to define which businesses can borrow through the platform. Key advantages for a borrower are that it is a relatively quick compared to traditional lending and allows for a mixture of investors. Likewise, lenders can choose the amount, consider the risk versus reward, and choose to make investments across one or multiple businesses, subject to the set criteria. Whilst platforms facilitate the lending, undertake credit assessments and other risk management, they do not act as a counter-party to the loan and contracts are direct between the investor and the borrower. P2P lending is regulated by the FCA and seen as an alternative to a bank loan.

OTHER SOURCES OF FINANCE
These can include government-sponsored initiatives. If funds are needed to help with exports, then export finance may be used to mitigate risk of default or delayed payments.
DOING BUSINESS IN THE UK

TURNAROUND, RECOVERY AND INSOLVENCY

There is a strong rescue culture in the United Kingdom, which, in the appropriate circumstances, includes options for dealing with a company in financial distress as alternatives to winding up. UK legislation promotes a rescue culture and encourages a company to seek those alternative solutions to its financial predicament and survive as a going concern. However, should the need arise, there is an established legal framework that enables the closure of a business if a company is insolvent or creditors, entitled to do so, wish to enforce their debt.

There are several legislative frameworks that are relevant to Turnaround, Recovery, and Insolvency in the UK. For the purposes of this summary, we focus on the two primary pieces of legislation being:

- The Insolvency Act 1986 (IA 1986); and
- Corporate Insolvency and Governance Act 2020 (CIGA 2020)

TURNAROUND

On 25 June 2020, the CIGA 2020 received Royal Assent and with it introduced temporary measures to insolvency laws to assist businesses facing financial difficulties during the COVID pandemic. These temporary measures were phased out over the following two years and are no longer in place, albeit measures to remove the threat of wrongful trading may still be relevant where a company, which enters administration or liquidation, was insolvent during the prescribed period.

However, the CIGA 2020 also created permanent legislation promoting business rescue, which provides a company facing financial distress with alternatives to formal insolvency. These are:

- A Court sanctioned restructuring plan that, if it is fair and equitable, binds creditors. While the plan is voted on by creditors, the Court can impose the plan on dissenting creditors.
- A moratorium ring fencing a company from creditor enforcement action, except without leave of the Court, while it pursues a rescue or restructuring plan. While moratorium is overseen by a monitor (a licensed insolvency practitioner) the day-to-day operation of the company remains with the directors.
- A prohibition on contractual termination clauses being enforced when a company enters an insolvency process, a moratorium, or begins a restructuring plan. This includes preventing suppliers from ceasing supply to a company going through a rescue process, except where hardship is caused to their own businesses through that continued supply. The CIGA 2020 includes safeguards for suppliers to ensure that the costs of the continued supply are met.

FORMAL INSOLVENCY

While the legislation introduced by the CIGA 2020 offers a reasonable alternative to formal insolvency, the associated costs of Court sanctioned restructuring and moratorium make them restrictive and therefore it is unlikely to be a process affordable and therefore utilised by majority of Small to Medium Sized Enterprises. Where such restriction applies, or where the circumstances require, the IA 1986 offers a range of formal insolvency legislation that either allows a company’s rescue or, where necessary, enables it’s winding up. These processes can be company/director or creditor driven.
The range of formal insolvency processes available are summarised in the following table:

<thead>

ii Following the introduction of the Enterprise Act 2002, the scope of the Administrative Receivership has much diminished and generally only can be initiated by holders of qualifying floating charges that existed prior to 15 September 2003.

iii On application by a creditor, the company, or the Secretary of State

MEMBERS VOLUNTARY LIQUIDATION (MVL)

Where the directors of a company consider that it can pay all of its debts plus statutory interest within 12 months of the appointment of a liquidator, it may be placed into MVL. Predominantly, the decision to place a company into MVL is made due to:

- The retirement of existing directors/owners with no succession arrangements.
- Reorganisation or restructuring strategies.
- The purpose for which the company was established has come to an end.
- The realisation of the company’s assets to enable distribution to its shareholders.

DIRECTORS DUTIES

There are various duties and obligations mandated by the Companies Act 2006 on directors, which include:

- To act within the powers as set out in the company’s Articles and Memorandum of Association
- To promote the success of the company
- To exercise independent judgement
- To exercise reasonable care, skill, and diligence
- To avoid conflicts of interest
- To not accept benefits from third parties
• To declare any interest in proposed arrangements with the company

Directors may incur personal liability and face potential disqualification from acting as a director of a company in the UK for their acts or omissions in directing a company.

The IA 1986 empowers the Court on the application of a liquidator or administrator of a company to make orders requiring a director to make a personal contribution where the director is found guilty of:

Wrongful Trading - failure to minimise the potential loss to creditors once a company becomes insolvent and knew, or ought to have known, that there was no prospect of avoiding insolvent liquidation.

Transactions at an undervalue - execution by a director of a transaction where the consideration paid is less than its value.

Preferential transactions – where the motivation of a transaction is to put a third party in a better position than they would have been on liquidation.

Transactions defrauding creditors – where the purpose of the transaction was to put the property of the company beyond the reach of its creditors.

Fraudulent trading – similar to wrongful trading, but with a criminal aspect as it is evidenced that there was an intent to defraud.

Misfeasance/breach of duty – breach of fiduciary duty by misapplying, retaining, or becoming accountable for any money or property of the company.

In circumstances where directors are concerned as to the financial stability of a company, they should seek immediate advice from a qualified insolvency practitioner in order to avoid or mitigate any consequences to the issues set out above.

The information contained within this section of the guide is intended to be a summary of the relevant processes in the UK and should not be construed as advice or relied upon for the purposes of providing advice. Should any issue relevant to issues set out herein arise, please contact our office for further and better particulars relevant to the circumstances.
3 – FOREIGN INVESTMENT

While there was a recovery of global direct investment in 2021 to pre-COVID-19 levels ($1.6 trillion), the war in Ukraine and the accompanying food, fuel and finance challenges has caused uncertainty regarding foreign investment.\(^29\)

The UK ranked 13 for FDI inflows in 2021 ($28 billion)\(^30\). This is a significant jump from FDI inflows in 2020 ($18 billion), when the UK ranked 16 in the global tables\(^31\).

UK TRADE

The UK’s new relationship with the EU, the impact of COVID-19, supply chain disruption and increased fuel prices as a result of the war in the Ukraine, and global recession have all caused higher levels of volatility in trade statistics. Another difficulty is changes to HMRC data collection between GB and EU for exports from January 2021 and for imports from January 2022\(^33\). This does make comparisons with earlier periods problematic.

4 – SETTING UP A BUSINESS

Several legal structures are available for carrying out business in the UK.

The most popular choice for foreign investors is to set up a private limited liability company either as a standalone company or as a subsidiary of a foreign-owned holding company.

The main advantage of a limited company is that it offers the shareholders limited liability. However, other options may suit individual circumstances and a summary of each is detailed below. The taxation treatment is explained in section six and accounting requirements in section seven.

PRIVATE LIMITED COMPANY
Most companies in the UK are registered as limited companies and regulated by the Companies Act 2006. A limited company is a legal entity in its own right and has separate and independent legal personality, distinct from its directors and shareholders.

COMPANIES LIMITED BY SHARES
The most popular form of limited company is a company limited by shares which means that the shareholders’ liability is limited to the amount outstanding (if any) on their shares in the company.

COMPANIES LIMITED BY GUARANTEE
A company can be limited by guarantee whereby every member of the company undertakes to contribute a fixed amount (such as £1) to the company's assets if it should be wound up, for payment of the company's debts and liabilities. These are mainly used for not-for-profit organisations such as charities, trade associations and clubs, and the company’s Articles of Association (its constitution) would usually have a clause ensuring that any profits are retained to further the objects of the company.

A new limited company can be incorporated within a few hours, to meet the exact name and share capital requirements from the outset.

DIRECTORS’ RESPONSIBILITIES
The Companies Act 2006 includes a statutory statement of the general duties of directors, replacing the previous regime of case law and statute. This is intended to make it easier for directors to understand what is expected of them. Directors must manage the company with reasonable care, skill and diligence and have a duty to act within their powers, to promote the success of the company and to exercise independent judgement. Additional duties include the duty to avoid conflicts of interest, not to accept benefits from third parties and to declare any interest in a proposed transaction or arrangement. This is particularly significant if the company has financial problems and may be insolvent. If a director fails in his duties, breaches the Companies Act or acts fraudulently, he may be fined, disqualified from acting as a director or even imprisoned. He may also be held personally liable for the company’s debts.
REGISTRATION REQUIREMENTS FOR PRIVATE COMPANIES
In order to register a company, also known as ‘incorporation’, the following information must be provided on the Form IN01 – ‘Application to Register a Company’, available on the government website, to Companies House:

- A suitable company name which is not the same as or too similar to the name of an existing company and does not contain sensitive or offensive words, as this will not be accepted. The full name of a limited company must also end with the word ‘Limited’ or ‘Ltd’.

- Details of the registered office address of the company to where official correspondence will be sent. This is usually the address of the company’s accountant, solicitor, or the trading address of the company.

- Details of at least one director (and a company secretary if desired), including personal details such as residential address, service address (this can be at the company’s registered office address to prevent the director’s residential address being made public), occupation, date of birth and nationality. Every company must have at least one director who is a ‘natural person’, which means that a private company is not permitted to have a sole corporate director (another company/legal entity). Regulations to limit the use of corporate directors, or only permit corporate directors who in turn only have natural persons as directors, are expected to be introduced once the Economic Crime and Corporate Transparency Bill 2022-23 receives Royal Assent. This bill also introduces Companies House reform, whereby, all directors and Persons of Significant Control will have to verify their details. It is anticipated that this will be by submission of their passport using a face recognition and scan facility or via a third party appointed agent, who must be supervised by HMRC for anti-money laundering purposes.

- Details of people with significant control over the company: this is in addition to the name of the registered shareholders and directors.

- Details of the company’s shares and the rights attached to them.

The above must be accompanied by the memorandum and articles of association:

- Memorandum – this is a brief statement of the intention of the subscriber(s) to be incorporated. There must be at least one subscriber to the memorandum who agrees to take at least one share in the company.

- Articles – these are the internal rules of conduct of the company.

If all is in order, the registrar of companies will issue a certificate of incorporation confirming the company name, the date of incorporation and the registered number. A company does not legally exist until the certificate has been issued. A private company may commence business as soon as it has been incorporated.

REPORTING REQUIREMENTS
Incorporation brings various filing and reporting obligations.

STATUTORY BOOKS

In the first instance, a company must maintain statutory registers (or statutory books as they are known) containing the memorandum and articles of association, as well as other company information, including:

- The Register of Members,
- The Register of Directors and Secretaries,
- The Register of Persons with Significant Control,
- Minutes of General Meetings,
- Minutes of Directors Meetings and
- The Register of Written Resolutions.

A further change expected as part of the Companies House reform will be that the register of directors and Person’s of Significant Control will be ‘live’ on Companies House records although the register of members will remain as it is currently, and will be held at the registered office of the Company.

The statutory books must be maintained in the UK and should be available for inspection at the registered office or, in some cases, at the Single Alternative Inspection Location (SAIL) address.

Any changes to the directors or secretary (or their personal details), to the registered office or any allotment of further shares, must be reported to the Registrar of Companies on the prescribed form.

Other instances where prescribed forms or copies of resolutions passed by the members must be filed with the Registrar of Companies include: changes to the articles of association and the registration of mortgages and charges.

ANNUAL ACCOUNTS
Annual accounts must be prepared and filed for every financial year, regardless of whether or not a company is trading. The accounts filed at Companies House must be in accordance with the Companies Act 2006. Failure to deliver accounts on time is a criminal offence and the law imposes a civil penalty for late filing.

EXTERNAL AUDIT
An annual audit by external auditors of the accounting records of the business should be carried out if it is over the minimum size (see Appendix III).

CONFIRMATION STATEMENT
A confirmation statement includes details about the company, its officers and members. An annual confirmation statement must be completed each year, reflecting any changes and delivered to Companies House. If a company does not submit a confirmation statement, the Registrar may take steps to strike off the company.

TRADING DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS
The Companies Act requires a company to display its full registered name in all forms of business correspondence and documentation, whether in hard copy or electronic format, including:

- business letters, notices and other official publications;
- business emails;
- bills of exchange, promissory notes, endorsements and order forms;
- cheques purporting to be signed by or on behalf of the company;
- orders for money, goods or services purporting to be signed by or on behalf of the company;
- bills of parcels, invoices and other demands for payment, receipts and letters of credit;
- applications for licences to carry on a trade or activity; and
- websites (not necessarily on every page but it must be displayed so it can be easily read).

PUBLIC LIMITED COMPANY

In order to offer its shares to the public, a company must be a Public Limited Company (‘plc’). A plc can also (but does not have to) list its shares on a stock market. If it is a listed company, it must, in addition, adhere to the rules of the stock market in which its shares are traded.

Public Limited Companies are regulated by the Companies Act 2006 (see Private Limited Company above) and the same registration and reporting requirements apply. Additionally, a plc must have a minimum of two directors, an appropriately qualified secretary and at least GBP 50,000 issued share capital (or the equivalent in another currency), a quarter of which must be paid up. The full name of a plc must end with ‘Public Limited Company’ or ‘plc’. A plc is also obliged to hold an annual general meeting (AGM) of its shareholders each year. Unlike a private company, a public company cannot immediately commence business on the issue of the Certificate of Incorporation. The company must first apply for a trading certificate which confirms that the company complies with the capital requirements for public companies.

Each UK stock market has its own listing and reporting requirements, procedures and rules of conduct, which can be onerous and time-consuming. For shares to become listed on any of the stock markets, the company will need a team of advisers, including stockbrokers, solicitors and accountants to carry out the necessary procedures.

SOLE TRADER

An individual can be in business on his own account. This option is often used by craftsmen, professionals and people setting up a small business, because it involves minimal paperwork and formalities.

There are no audit requirements, but certain minimum records are required for personal tax, VAT and PAYE purposes, and the individual is liable for all the debts of the business. Any official paperwork, such as letters or invoices, must include the name of the owner of the business as well as any business name.

PARTNERSHIP

Defined by the Partnership Act 1890, a partnership does not exist as a separate legal entity. The partners in the business have joint and several liability for any liabilities of the business, so their personal property is at risk if the business faces large claims against it.

Profits from the business are taxed as the income of each partner. Certain minimum records must be kept for VAT and Pay As You Earn (PAYE) purposes. Usually, a partnership agreement is drawn up by lawyers which determines how the partnership is governed and how the profits are shared. This option is common for professional firms and is also widely used by small business start-ups.
LIMITED LIABILITY PARTNERSHIP (LLP)
An LLP exists in law as a body corporate, subject to aspects of company law, with the personal assets of LLP members being protected; it has a mix of corporate and partnership characteristics. There must be at least two members and they can be individuals, and or, corporate entities. Profits are taxed as if it were a partnership, provided it is carrying on a trade or profession. The business name must end with the letters LLP. The registration procedure and reporting requirements are similar to that of companies and an LLP is registered at Companies House.

An agreement is essential to formalize the relationship between members in respect of capital share, exit provisions, management and other important matters. There is no requirement to file the LLP agreement with the Registrar of Companies so it can remain confidential to the partners.

OTHER OPTIONS FOR TRADING IN THE UK

UK ESTABLISHMENT OF AN OVERSEAS COMPANY
Within one month of opening a UK establishment, an overseas company must deliver to Companies House a completed application form for registration of an overseas company opening a UK establishment (Form OS IN01). This will need to contain details of the directors and company secretary, details of the UK establishment and the names and addresses of any permanent representatives of the company and/or a person resident in the UK authorised to accept notices on the company’s behalf. The Form OS IN01 must be accompanied by certified copies (and certified translations if appropriate) of the constitutional documents and a copy of the latest disclosed accounts. The company must also notify the Registrar of Companies of any changes to the above information.

JOINT VENTURE
It is possible to set up a joint venture with an existing UK business by forming a business which is part-owned by them and part-owned by an overseas business. The exact arrangements can vary depending on circumstances, the balance of finance and/or practical involvement. Every case is different, so it is important to obtain professional advice to ensure that the two parties are clear about respective responsibilities and obligations, and that arrangements can be made if one party wishes to withdraw from the arrangement.

AGENTS
It may be preferable, certainly at an early stage of trading, to appoint an agent to act on behalf of the supplier business. This avoids having any UK corporate presence, but enables the supplying business, as a result of the agent’s efforts, to sell its products or services in the UK. The agent may wish to negotiate an exclusive contract, which may or may not suit the supplier business.

Professional advice should be taken to ensure that the contract with the agent is lawful and unbiased and that payments are made in the most tax-efficient form.

FRANCHISES
Buying a franchise allows you to set up your business without starting from the very beginning. You buy a licence from an existing business in order to use their trade name, business name or product idea. This will involve paying ongoing fees or royalties on sales. In return, you receive support and advice from the franchisor.
REGISTRATION WITH AUTHORITIES – FOR ALL BUSINESSES

TAXATION
Businesses must register with the HM Revenue & Customs (HMRC) for PAYE (Pay As You Earn – Income Tax deducted from employees’ wages) and National Insurance payments for employees, and for Corporation Tax for registered companies.

VAT (SALES TAX)
A business must register with HMRC for VAT if the taxable turnover of the business is more than GBP 85,000 in any 12-month period or if taxable turnover exceeding this level is expected in the next 30 days alone. A business can register for VAT on a voluntary basis if its taxable turnover is below this threshold or if it has sales to non-UK customers that would otherwise be taxable in the UK. Registering for VAT can be advantageous for many types of business. Non-resident businesses supplying goods or services in the UK and subject to UK VAT have a zero registration threshold and must register for VAT immediately they commence trading. Thereafter, quarterly returns to declare VAT invoiced on sales and reclaim VAT paid out on expenditure must be submitted although some businesses may choose to file monthly or annual VAT returns subject to certain conditions. There are several simplified arrangements for smaller businesses.

There are three rates of VAT in the UK – 20%, 5% and 0%. Many types of business activities are exempt from VAT. It is important to use the correct VAT treatment or both the supplier and customer can encounter problems.

Most businesses are able to reclaim VAT paid out on business expenditure, although there are many conditions and types of expenditure on which VAT cannot be reclaimed. Also, businesses that have both taxable and exempt income may not be able to reclaim all the VAT they incur on expenditure.

There are a number of special rules relating to online market places, online sales direct to the public when the goods are outside the UK at the time of sale and digital services provided direct to a non-business customer.

LICENCES
Depending on the nature of the business, it may require licences from local or central authorities or from providers of software etc. Trading licences are required for consumer credit, sale of alcohol and tobacco, gambling and other restricted activities.

DATA PROTECTION
Under the Data Protection Act 1998, businesses need to register with the Information Commissioner’s Office to hold and process information on living individuals, including employees and customers. From 25 May 2018, the Data Protection Act has been replaced by the General Data Protection Regulation.

INSURANCE
Compulsory cover is needed for employer’s liability (personal injury and damage to personal property of employees). Any business vehicles must have motor insurance, and it is advisable to have insurance against public liability, property (fire and theft) and business interruption. In rented property, occupier’s liability insurance may also be required.

COPYRIGHT, PATENTS AND ROYALTIES
The Patent Office, which is a government agency, oversees all matters relating to intellectual property including the registration of copyrights and patents.
COLLECTIVE INVESTMENT SCHEMES
Special rules apply to collective investment schemes, details of which are covered at:
www.hmrc.gov.uk/cisc.
5 – LABOUR

EMPLOYMENT

Employment rules in the UK are designed to ensure that there is no discrimination or unfair treatment of employees and they can work in relative safety and comfort. Key pieces of legislation include:

- Employment Rights Act
- Equality Act
- Modern Slavery Act
- Anti-Bribery Act
- Public Interest Disclosure (Whistleblowing)

Since 2017, businesses with 250 or more employees are required to comply with regulations on gender pay gap reporting.

Employment law is a complex and fast-changing area and as a result, employers should be prepared to seek advice from a specialist lawyer to ensure they have adequate procedures and controls in place to comply with this area of the law.

Employees who claim unfair dismissal or discrimination can take their case to an employment tribunal which may order the employer to pay compensation if the case is proved. Where an employer is found to have discriminated against a member of staff, on the grounds of sex, race, gender reassignment, disability, sexual orientation, religion or religious belief, or age, they may face a potentially unlimited award of damages against them for both loss of earnings and injury to feelings. Damages for unfair dismissal, however, are based mainly on an employee’s loss of earnings, which will be limited to £93,878 or 52 weeks gross salary - whichever is the lower.

RIGHT TO WORK IN THE UK

Employers are only able to employ individuals who have permission to live and work in the UK. Individuals fall into various different categories for immigration purposes depending upon their citizenship or nationality. Some individuals are automatically entitled to live and work in the UK, whereas others are required to seek permission to work.

Rules relating to the categories of individuals who require a visa or corporate sponsorship to work are complicated and advice should be sought before making an offer of employment to any individual where there is any doubt concerning their right to work in the UK. Companies now need to hold a sponsorship licence granted by the UK Border Agency before they can sponsor a non UK employee to work in the UK.

Generally, the following workers have the right to work in the UK without seeking additional permission to work:

- British and Irish citizens (conferred by birth, descent, naturalisation or registration)
- Commonwealth citizens with leave to remain in the UK on the basis of a grandparent born in the UK
- People with a right of abode or settled status in the UK
• People with exceptional or indefinite leave to remain in the UK for humanitarian reasons, or who have limited leave to remain on the same basis, provided this has not expired
• Spouses, dependants and unmarried partners (including same sex partners) of people in some of the above categories allowing them to work.

Employers can be fined if their employees do not have a valid UK work visa. Employers are required to make basic document checks on every worker they take on, before employment commences, in order to establish that they are not taking on an illegal worker. Employers should seek advice about which combinations of documents are acceptable because failure to demonstrate adequate steps have been taken, where the employment of illegal workers has ensued, can result in a fine of up to GBP 20,000 per worker or up to five years in prison.

CONTRACTS OF EMPLOYMENT
From 6 April 2020, both workers and employees are entitled to receive written particulars from day one of their employment. Failure to do so can result in an award of two weeks wages (or four weeks’ pay at the tribunal’s discretion) being made by an employment tribunal. The statement of particulars needs to cover certain information including amongst other things remuneration, hours and place of work, holidays and notice.

There are statutory requirements covering many aspects of employment such as maximum working time, minimum hourly wage, maternity pay and leave, parental leave, sick pay, redundancy pay and others with which employers need to be familiar.

PERMANENT, TEMPORARY AND PART-TIME EMPLOYMENT
A permanent contract of employment will usually have a probationary period of three months (although this is not necessary) depending on the seniority of the post, with a minimum notice period. After the probationary period, the notice period for both employer and employee is usually lengthened. An employer is required to give one week’s notice to employees with up to two years’ continuous service, and thereafter, one week for each completed year of service up to a maximum of twelve weeks unless the provision in the statement of particulars is longer. The statutory minimum notice an employee must give to terminate their employment is one week in the absence of a contractual agreement.

Part-time workers must be given the same rights as full-time workers, but proportionate to their hours of work and length of service. In addition to this, with effect from 1 October 2011, temporary agency workers have the right to equal treatment in comparison with permanent workers or employees as regards certain basic working and employment conditions after completing a 12 week qualifying period in the same job role with the same hirer. The requirement is to afford the agency worker the same basic working and employment conditions as they would have received if they had been directly recruited by the hirer to that job role. The terms and conditions affected are pay, the duration of working time, night work, rest periods, rest breaks and annual leave.

Furthermore, from the first day of their assignment, agency workers are now entitled to the same access to certain collective facilities provided by the hirer (such as a canteen, childcare, car parking and transport facilities) and to the same information on job vacancies as comparable permanent workers or employees.

It is also possible to employ staff on a temporary, fixed-term contract. The Fixed Term Employees (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations 2002 and Part-Time Workers (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations 2000 (as amended) make it unlawful to treat temporary or part-time workers less favourably than full-time permanent staff.

GRIEVANCE AND DISCIPLINARY POLICY
Companies are required to act in a reasonable manner, good practice being to investigate the need for a hearing, to invite the employee to a meeting to discuss the issue and to allow the right of appeal against any disciplinary action. Workers have the right to be accompanied at any formal hearings.

When deciding whether an award is due to employees, employment tribunals are guided by the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service (ACAS) Code of Practice in determining whether employers have acted in a fair and reasonable manner. These tribunals have the authority to increase or decrease an award by 25% if either party fails to follow the Code.

WAGES – PAYROLL RESPONSIBILITIES
Employers must deduct Income Tax and National Insurance contributions (NICs) from the wages/salary of their employees according to the tax coding given to the individuals by HMRC. This is known as Pay As You Earn (PAYE). In addition, employers are required to pay employers’ NICs. All the tax and NICs deductions and payments must be sent to HMRC promptly, and returns must be filed both monthly through online payroll reporting and annually stating total payments and the taxable value of any benefits in kind (see below).

In April 2016, the National Living Wage (NLW) was introduced for employees aged 23 and over. These rates are reviewed annually and changes implemented on 1 April each year (see appendix IV).

Employers will need to automatically enrol all staff into a qualifying pension scheme, although there is an optional three-month postponement period. Staff may opt out, of their own volition, within a four week window if they wish their contributions to be refunded. Minimum employee and employer contributions are set.

Any data concerning payroll is classed as sensitive data under the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) and employers are required to take adequate steps to ensure that the data is secure.

The number of different taxes, benefits and other calculations can make payroll tasks time-consuming and complex for employers, but there are payroll service providers available who will contract to do these tasks for a fee.

BENEFITS IN KIND
Depending on the nature of the work and the availability of people with the necessary skills, employers may offer additional benefits in kind to their employees. These range from a subsidised canteen to a company car, pension contributions, health club membership, private medical insurance, share options and so on. For taxation purposes, the government calculates the cash equivalent value of these benefits and employees are taxed accordingly. Employers must ensure that annual returns are submitted which detail any benefits in kind.

REDUNDANCY, UNEMPLOYMENT, SOCIAL SERVICES
When there is a closure of the employer’s business, an employee’s place of work or a diminished need for employees, usually caused by a downturn in business or restructuring, employees can be made redundant. If an employee has been working for more than the minimum period (currently two years), he or she is legally entitled to a statutory redundancy payment, which is calculated according to age, length of service and salary, subject to a maximum of GBP 571.00 per week for each continuous year of service (up to the last 20 years of service).

There is also a strict obligation placed upon employers to consult with their workforce before implementing redundancies. Depending upon the number of redundancies, employers may be required to consult for up to 45 days and notify the Department for Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy (BEIS) of the impending redundancies.

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS/TRADE UNIONS
Membership of trade unions has declined in recent years and scope for industrial action has also become more limited. However, every employee has the right to be a member of a trade union. Where an industry remains heavily unionised, trade unions are likely to be involved in pay negotiations, training needs and grievance and disciplinary proceedings, working closely with personnel/human resources staff.

HEALTH AND SAFETY
The Health & Safety Executive (HSE) requires all employers to ensure the health and safety of their employees. The HSE issues directives on all aspects of safety and can prosecute businesses which do not comply. HSE inspectors visit employers’ premises to ensure compliance and they have the power to close a business if it is deemed dangerous.

Under the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007, companies and organisations can be found guilty of corporate manslaughter on the basis of gross health and safety management failings. The legislation focuses on the corporate liability of an organisation as a whole. There is no limit on the level of fine which a court can impose under the legislation, nor is it possible for employers to obtain insurance against a fine. Employers must therefore be satisfied that their health and safety management procedures are appropriate, effectively managed throughout the workplace and regularly reviewed.

ALTERNATIVES TO EMPLOYMENT

SUBCONTRACTORS AND OUTSOURCING
It is common in some industries (e.g. construction) for businesses to use a subcontractor (either a business or a self-employed person) instead of employing someone with particular skills for a specific task. Many businesses and public bodies also outsource some non-core activities of their business (such as catering, facilities management, security and accounts) to external suppliers in return for a fixed price. In both cases, the business has a contract with another business (or self-employed person) for the supply of a service or component product, rather than having to employ people directly. This can reduce costs and administrative time and provide higher quality skills for specific tasks, whilst at the same time relieving the business of the liabilities and responsibilities related to being an employer.

SELF-EMPLOYMENT
It is possible to set up a business as a self-employed person. HMRC use different methods for assessing and collecting Income Tax and National Insurance, both of which are generally lower than for someone who is employed.

Disputes between businesses and individuals over employee status can be relatively common given the rights afforded to employees as opposed to workers (i.e. non-employees). Employment tribunals are required to apply a series of tests in order to establish whether a person has employee status. When seeking to engage individuals on a self-employed basis, it is advisable to obtain advice from a solicitor specialising in employment law who can assist you in establishing whether an individual would be treated as an employee by an employment tribunal. However, it should be noted that tax treatment as a self-employed person for taxation purposes is not decided upon on exactly the same basis as for employment rights and it is possible for a worker to be treated as self-employed for tax purposes, yet still have some employment rights as a worker. Again, specialist advice should be obtained.

Special regulations can apply where an individual uses a company structure to sell his/her services to a client (often referred to as IR35), requiring an assessment of whether a contract is one of employment or self-employment. If the contract is one of employment, income receivable by the company is taxed as if it was salary with the consequential effect upon Income Tax, and employers and employee NIC rates applying. Managed service companies are subject to similar regulations. Otherwise, company income is taxed under corporation tax rules, leaving the owners of the company to decide how to reward themselves in the most tax efficient way.
6 – TAXATION

TAX AUTHORITIES AND RESPONSIBILITY
The administration and collection of taxes within the UK is undertaken by HM Revenue & Customs (HMRC).

HMRC are responsible for administering and collecting all national taxes which include: Corporation Tax, Diverted Profits Tax, Income tax, National Insurance, Capital Gains Tax, VAT, Annual Tax on Enveloped Dwellings (ATED), Stamp Duty and Stamp Duty Land Tax. Land and Buildings Transaction Tax applies instead of the latter in Scotland and is administered by Revenue Scotland. From 6 April 2016, a Scottish rate of Income Tax was introduced and is administered by Revenue Scotland. A lower corporation tax rate was also introduced in Northern Ireland in April 2018.

In addition to the above taxes, which are collected on a national basis, local town, city or county authorities are able to collect Council Tax, which is levied by reference to the value of business or residential property rather than profits or income.

BASIS OF TAXATION
Liability to taxation depends upon the residency of the company, individual or trust, and the location of assets and source of income. Companies and individuals who are residents in the UK typically pay tax on their worldwide income and gains, whereas non-residents are subject to tax only on UK-source income.

An individual who is resident but not domiciled in the UK may opt to be taxed on ‘the remittance basis’ under which foreign income is taxed only if brought to the UK. There is generally a cost to claiming the remittance basis in terms of the loss of tax-free allowances and exemptions and, for longer-term residents, an annual charge of GBP 30,000 or GBP 60,000 depending on the length of their UK residence. Where individuals have been resident for 15 years or more, then they will be deemed domiciled in the UK and all further tax benefits will then cease.

Where foreign income of UK residents is taxable, a credit for foreign tax paid may be given in accordance with double tax arrangements.

BUSINESS TAXES

RESIDENT COMPANIES
There are two tests that need to be considered when determining whether a company is tax resident in the UK. Firstly, any company which is incorporated in the UK is automatically considered to be UK tax resident.

In addition to this, any company, regardless of the location of its incorporation, will be considered to be UK tax resident if it is managed and controlled in the UK.

It is therefore possible for a company to be UK resident by virtue of its management and control, but also resident in an overseas jurisdiction by virtue of their tax law. The residence status of these companies can be resolved with reference to the relevant tax treaty, if one exists.
Companies incorporated outside the UK but not managed and controlled in the UK, will only have a liability to corporation tax based on the profits of their UK branch or permanent establishment.

CORPORATION TAX

Companies resident in the UK pay Corporation Tax on their worldwide trading profits, income and capital gains (see Appendix II for current rate of Corporation Tax).

The rate of Corporation Tax was 19% up until 1 April 2023 when it increased to 25% for companies with profits over £250,000. Companies with a profit of £50,000 or less will continue to be taxed at 19% whilst companies with profits between £50,000 and £250,000 will pay tax at the main rate reduced by a marginal relief providing a gradual increase in the effective rate.

These limits will be proportionately reduced for short accounting periods and where there are associated companies. The 51% group company test will be repealed and replaced by associated company rules when determining whether a company is large or very large for quarterly instalment calculations.

Large companies (usually profits greater than £1.5m) are obliged to pay tax in four instalments. Based on a 12-month accounting period, the first payment is due on the 14th day of the seventh month of their accounting period and then quarterly thereafter, with the final payment made on the 14th day of the sixteenth month following the start of the accounting period. Interest is chargeable in the event of tax payments or instalments being late and is repayable if payments are excessive. Companies who are not defined as large normally pay their Corporation Tax liability nine months and one day after the end of the accounting period. Accelerated payment rates now apply to very large companies (where taxable profits exceed £20m) by imposing instalments in months three, six, nine and 12.

A company has 12 months from the end of their accounting period to file their tax return. Generally, HMRC then has 12 months to open an enquiry into the return. Penalties are levied for both late filing and for filing an incorrect return.

Loans to shareholders or other participators are likely to incur a special tax (32.5%), which is payable nine months after the accounting period in which the loan is provided. However, once the loan is repaid or forgiven, the tax should become repayable to the company nine months after the relevant period.

DIVIDEND EXEMPTION

Subject to certain anti-avoidance rules, dividends received from both UK and overseas subsidiaries (located in most treaty countries) will not normally be taxed in the UK. This is one of the measures which make the UK an attractive location for a holding company.

LOSSES

In general, trading losses may be carried back for 12 months or carried forward indefinitely, subject to changes in ownership and the nature or conduct of the trade. Current year losses may also be surrendered between group members to offset against their profits for the same period. Similar relief is available for excess interest costs, but excess management expenses of investment companies may not be carried back.

There will be an extension to the trading loss carry back rules for company accounting periods ending in the period 1 April 2020 to 31 March 2022, and by unincorporated businesses in tax years 2020 to 2021 and 2021 to 2022. The carry back for trading losses was extended from the current one-year entitlement to a period of three years, with losses being carried back against later years first.

The carried back amount of trading losses to the preceding year remains unlimited whilst there will be a restriction to a maximum of £2m of unused losses carried back to each of the earlier two years against profits of the same trade. Groups will be subject to a group cap of £2m for each relevant period. This loss carry back will need to be included in the company tax return, however claims below a de minis limit of £200,000 may be made outside a return. Therefore, a standalone company can make this claim of less than £200,000 for the relevant accounting period and will not need to wait until the return is submitted.

Reforms to loss relief, allowing losses brought forward to be offset against other income, and a restriction to 50% offset where profits are above £5m, took effect from April 2017. See below for more information on capital losses.

CAPITAL ALLOWANCES

Book depreciation or amortisation of tangible assets is not allowable for tax purposes; instead, relief by way of capital allowances is often available. Purchases of plant and machinery are eligible for writing down allowances (WDA), typically 18% on the reducing balance. Integral assets (IA) within a commercial building (e.g. lighting, heating, ventilation etc.) and long life assets only qualify for 6% WDA per annum. However, a 100% annual investment allowance (AIA) is available for the first GBP £1,000,000 of expenditure on any plant and machinery or IA.

A structure and buildings allowance (SBA) of 3% is available on qualifying costs for new non-residential structures and buildings, business constructing or renovating structures from 29 October 2018.

Between 1 April 2021 and 31 March 2023, certain companies investing in qualifying new plant and machinery benefited from the new first year capital allowances. A company was allowed to claim a 130% super-deduction capital allowance on most new plant and machinery investments that ordinarily qualified for 18% main rate writing down allowances, and a first year allowance of 50% on most new plant and machinery investments that ordinarily qualify for 6% special rate writing down allowances.

From 1 April 2023 until 31 March 2026, companies can claim a 100% first year allowance for main rate expenditure known as full expensing. Companies will continue to be able to claim the 50% first year allowance for special rate expenditure.

An initial allowance of 100% is available for certain types of energy efficient expenditure or on cars with very low CO₂ emissions. By contrast, assets leased abroad are only eligible for 8% WDA.

A 100% Enhanced Capital Allowance (ECA) will be available to companies for qualifying expenditure on plant and machinery for use within Freeport sites. The plant and machinery must be new or unused and be for the purpose of a qualifying activity carried out within a Freeport between 2021 and September 2026. The allowance will be available on the qualifying expenditure in the tax year when incurred but could be clawed back if within five years of the acquisition/usage it is used outside of the Freeport site. In addition to the ECA, a 10% rate of structures and buildings allowance will be available for business constructions or renovating structures and buildings used for non-residential use.

INTANGIBLE FIXED ASSETS
Relief is available for expenditure incurred in the creation, acquisition or enhancement of intangible assets (typically goodwill, patents, trademarks, copyrights and the like) based on the profit and loss account charge. Conversely, credits to the profit and loss account and profits on disposal will be taxable as income. Assets created or acquired before 1 April 2002 or from a connected party other than a group company will remain chargeable as capital gains and so are not eligible for the above relief. Major restrictions apply to goodwill and customer related intangible assets acquired on or after 8 July 2015.

RESTRICTION FOR INTEREST DEDUCTIONS

The Worldwide Debt Cap (WDC) regime, which restricted UK interest relief where UK borrowing is considered excessive to a company’s worldwide group, has been replaced by a modified interest relief restriction with effect from 1 April 2017. From then on tax relief is limited to 30% of ‘tax-EBITDA’ (taxable profits less interest, tax depreciation and amortisation and all losses but after adding back chargeable gains). A de minimis allowance of £2m will exclude a large number of companies from this restriction.

The UK also has both thin capitalisation rules which may restrict the extent to which interest paid to connected parties will qualify for a tax deduction and the normal arm’s length interest rate restrictions.

HYBRID MISMATCH

Hybrid mismatch rules applied from 1 January 2017 to deny a tax deduction in the UK where there is a deduction available in another country, or where the corresponding receipt is not treated as taxable income. In addition, the rules will ensure that income is taxable in the UK where a deduction arising from a hybrid arrangement has not been denied in another country. New legislation has been introduced to ensure that the regime operates proportionately and as intended; this has included an amendment to the definition of dual inclusion income to reduce the number of occasions where the anti-avoidance rules will apply. A company is required to make disclosures in the tax return if it is a hybrid entity and any anti-hybrid adjustments made in the tax return.

DIVERTED PROFITS TAX

From April 2015 a company can be charged to a separate tax, 31%, which is not covered by the UK’s double tax treaties. This applies if contrived arrangements have avoided UK tax by avoiding a UK permanent establishment or certain other arrangements between connected parties.

GENERAL ANTI-ABUSE RULE (GAAR)

In addition to extensive targeted anti-avoidance legislation, the UK operates a GAAR for most taxes, excluding VAT. The GAAR seeks to adjust the results which fail the so called ‘double reasonableness’ test as being avoidance through abusive use of tax rules. The ‘double reasonableness’ test attempts to restrict the use of this by deeming that arrangements are abusive if the entering into them cannot reasonably be regarded as a reasonable course of action.

GROUPS OF COMPANIES – CAPITAL GAINS

Special arrangements exist for a group of UK companies to elect for the gain or loss realised on the disposal of a capital asset to be taken by another group member, thereby enabling them to mitigate tax. This is, in effect, a form of group relief for capital losses, but pre-acquisition losses or gains of companies joining the group are ring-fenced to prevent abuse.

Disposals of substantial shareholdings in trading subsidiaries may be exempt if the shareholder continues to be a parent of a trading company, or a trader in its own right.
Doing Business in the UK

Immediately after the disposal. The definition of a substantial shareholding for this exemption to apply is a holding of no less than 10%. The condition requiring the investor to still be trading after the disposal is abolished for disposals after 1 April 2017.

This exemption, coupled with the dividend exemption referred to previously, have combined to make the UK an attractive jurisdiction to locate a holding company.

Capital Gains and Losses

Normally companies are chargeable for Corporation Tax (see Appendix II) on the excess of the sale proceeds or disposal value for chargeable assets over their cost, after taking into account indexation relief, which is based on published rates linked to inflation over the period of ownership. Indexation allowance was frozen with effect from 1 January 2018 – so that there will be no further relief for the gains attributable to inflation. Losses arising from the disposal of assets in the same period or losses brought forward may be offset against the gain. Since 1 April 2020, capital losses carried forward can only be used to offset 50% of any net capital gain subject to the annual £5m deductions allowance.

Groups of Companies – Overseas Branch

Until recently, companies with an overseas branch of a UK company would be liable to taxation in the UK with a credit provided for any foreign tax incurred. In practice, this meant that profits in branches with a lower tax rate than the UK would incur additional tax in the UK.

A foreign branch exemption has changed this, as companies can now opt out of having the profits of their overseas branches taxed in the UK. The effect of opting into this legislation restricts the losses of overseas branches being utilised against any profits arising in the UK.

Groups of Companies – Controlled Foreign Company Rules

A Controlled Foreign Company (CFC) is a non-resident company controlled by UK resident persons. Any UK resident company may be assessable on the CFC profits if it holds a 25% or more interest in the CFC. However, if one of the following statutory exemptions applies to the CFC then no assessment can occur:

- Temporary period – normally up to 12 months
- Excluded territories - typically treaty countries
- Low profits – less than £500K trading or £50k otherwise
- Low profit – less than 10% of relevant operating expenditure
- Local tax – at least 75% of corresponding UK tax.

Taxation of Branches of Foreign Companies

UK profits of a branch or other permanent establishment of a non-UK resident company are normally subject to corporation tax in the same way as a UK company. Allocated head office expenses need to be arm’s length and justified in the same way as other expenditure with connected parties. This is subject to hybrid mismatch rules. Interest on debt due to the head office may not be allowed. Gains realised on assets used in the UK trade are also chargeable.

Special relief is available for the conversion of the branch into a UK resident company, although relief for losses carried forward may be restricted where the head office has also obtained relief for the loss.

Special Rules – Oil and Gas Activities
Companies undertaking a petroliferous trade in either the UK or in UK territorial waters are subject to an additional tax regime, whereby profits arising from exploration are isolated from other profits such as refining and marketing. The key effect is that losses from other trades cannot be used against these ring-fenced profits.

This regime imposes a supplementary tax on UK profits. With effect from 1 January 2016, ring-fenced profits are taxed at a main rate of 30% and a supplementary charge of 10%.

The Energy (Oil & Gas) Profits Levy announced in May 2022 was a new and temporary tax levy on ring fenced profits on oil and gas companies at a rate of 25%.

This measure has since been increased to 35% and the time extended that the levy applies to 31 March 2028. This measure also reduces the investment allowance from 80% to 29%. However, the investment allowance will remain at 80% for investment expenditure on upstream decarbonisation. This change in relation to the treatment of upstream decarbonisation investment expenditure will be legislated for in due course.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Another measure making the UK a favourable tax territory for companies involves two distinct regimes which give relief over and above actual expenditure on research and development. The first operates for small and medium enterprises (SMEs) and the second for large companies.

An SME may claim 186% (previously 230% up until April 2023) of the cost against its profits, or where losses are incurred may seek a repayable credit of 10% (reduced from 14.5% since April 2023)

For accounting periods commencing on or after 1 April 2021 the credit claimed is limited to £20,000 plus three times the company’s relevant expenditure on workers, being the company’s own PAYE and NIC liabilities for the period plus some PAYE and NIC liabilities of any connected persons doing subcontracted R&D work for the company. There is an exemption to the cap if the employees are creating, preparing to create or managing Intellectual Property and less than 15% of its R&D qualifying expenditure is spent with connected persons.

From 1 April 2023 large companies can claim an ‘above the line’ credit of 20% (previously 13%). This is the rate after corporation tax is deducted at the new 25% rate, which also became effective on 1 April 2023. Overall, it represents a net ‘cash’ tax saving of 15% of total R&D expenditure; an increase of 4.47%.

Where certain capital expenditure is incurred on a qualifying project(s) then Research and Development Allowances may also apply at 100%.

From April 2023 the R&D tax reliefs has been reformed to include all cloud computing costs associated with R&D including storage.

R&D activity will have to be physically located in the UK for the costs to be included in R&D tax relief claims. UK companies who currently claim R&D costs paid to overseas group companies or third parties may no longer be able to include these costs in their claims.

The government recognises that there are some cases where it is necessary for the R&D to take place overseas. The government will, therefore, legislate so that expenditure on overseas R&D activities can still qualify where there are material factors such as geography, environment, population or other conditions that may not be present in the UK and are required for the research or there are regulatory/other legal requirements that activities must take place outside of the UK e.g., deep sea ocean projects or clinical trials.

The government will provide further details in the near future of changes to expand qualifying expenditure to cover R&D underpinned by pure mathematics. This reform will support sectors where the UK has a comparative advantage such as Artificial Intelligence, quantum computing and robotics while also supporting strong sectors such as manufacturing and design.

For accounting periods beginning on or after 1 April 2023, companies will need to notify HMRC if they plan to make an R&D claim if the following applies:

- They are claiming for the first time
- They have claimed for the previous tax year, but did not submit that claim until after the last date of the claim notification period (the claim notification period ends 6 months after the end of the period of account)
- The last claim was made more than 3 years before the last date of the claim notification period

The latest date that the claim notification form needs to be submitted is 6 months after the end of the period of account that the claim relates to. If the notification is not submitted by this deadline, the claim may not be valid.

In addition to this, from 1 August 2023, companies must submit an additional information form to support the R&D claim. This includes company details as well as information relating to the qualifying expenditure and the project details.

PARTNERSHIPS

A partnership will be resident in the UK if most of the individuals or companies which comprise the firm are resident here. However, such entities are not taxed as such, but merely have to report the profits and income derived by their members. Each member is taxed on their share, together with their non-partnership income or gains. Thus, a non-resident member of a resident partnership is taxable on their share of the profits arising in the UK.

LIMITED LIABILITY PARTNERSHIP (LLP)

Strictly speaking, this is an incorporated body registered at Companies House. However, where it conducts its business with a view to a profit, it will be treated as a look-through for tax purposes. Thus, the same concepts as for a partnership (see above) will apply in taxing the profits or gains of the members. Where the LLP is not conducting business with a view to profit (e.g., it is in the process of being wound up), then it will be treated as a limited company and any income will be chargeable for Corporation Tax.

Members of an LLP need to pass at least one test relating to profit share, capital, or control, otherwise they will be treated as an employee rather than a partner for tax purposes. Where the LLP has both individual and company members, the profits allocated to the company member may be attributed to an associated individual and taxed accordingly.
NATIONAL INSURANCE CONTRIBUTIONS (NICS)
Sole traders and partners (self-employed individuals) are required to register their business activity and pay National Insurance contributions based on their profits (see appendix II). This is now collected through the tax self-assessment.

In addition to collecting employees’ Income Tax and NICs by withholding the relevant amount from their wages or salary payments, an employer has to bear the cost of a further employers’ NIC (see appendix II) on both remuneration and benefits in kind provided to employees. The collection and remittance of these taxes by the employer is done under a system known as Pay As You Earn (PAYE). Favourably reduced rates apply for apprentices as well as those under 21 and most employers will be eligible for an NIC rebate which has increased from £4,000 to £5,000 from April 2022. This amount is set against employers Class 1 NIC (available where the employer’s NIC liability for the previous tax year was less than £100,000).

AUTO-ENROLMENT
A workplace pensions regime applies to employers who do not provide a qualifying pension scheme. All eligible jobholders will need to be automatically enrolled into a pension scheme with contribution rates of up to 8% (including at least 3% from the employee).

UK REAL ESTATE
Resident individuals’ or companies’ rental income from UK property is not subject to withholding tax, but the surplus is chargeable at their marginal rate of tax. They are also chargeable upon the gain realised on the disposal of UK property. Non-UK resident individuals who receive income from letting out UK property are subject to the provisions of the Non-resident Landlord Scheme (NRLS). The NRLS requires Income Tax at basic rate (currently at 20%) to be withheld on the rent, either by the tenant or the letting agent as appropriate. However, the landlord can receive the rental gross (without the deduction of tax) if they receive permission from HMRC. HMRC will normally grant permission for this provided the landlord satisfies the relevant conditions. Where gross status is granted, the NRL will need to complete and submit annual self-assessment tax returns and ensure that its tax liabilities are settled on time under the self-assessment regime.

Companies owning residential property used by connected parties are subject to an annual tax on enveloped dwellings (ATED) if the value of the property is above £500k. Certain companies can claim a relief from paying ATED, but nevertheless need to file the claim by the same deadline with the risk of penalties on a daily basis notwithstanding to ATED if payable.

Both non-resident individuals and companies owning UK residential property, whether occupied by connected parties or otherwise, will be taxable upon the relevant gain realised on disposal. These rules also applied to non-residential property from 6 April 2019, with gains accrued after this date being brought into charge.

From 6 April 2020, non-resident landlord companies that carry on a UK property business or have UK property income are being charged to Corporation Tax rather than Income Tax. They are being assessed using the Corporation Tax rules including the corporate interest restriction rules on the deductibility of financing costs, hybrid mismatch rules, use of losses etc. and will be required to register, prepare and file Corporation Tax returns and accounts annually.

Effective from 1 August 2022, overseas entities transacting with property or land in the UK must now register with Companies House and identify their beneficial owners. These new regulations applied retrospectively to owner entities who bought property or land on or after 1 January 1999 in England and Wales and 8 December 2014 in Scotland.

REPATRIATION OF PROFITS
Pre-tax profits may be repatriated by companies in the form of tax-deductible interest, rent, royalties or management charges, provided the cost can be justified as being arm’s length. However, the first three items may be subject to withholding taxes, except where clearances are obtained in accordance with a relevant double tax treaty.

The application of withholding taxes to interest or royalties is at 20%, however royalties may now be self-assessed by the UK payer, but the liability remains due if the overseas entity was not eligible for relief. Excessive payments may be treated as both disallowable for Corporation Tax purposes and also as a distribution for double tax treaty or income purposes.

Post-tax profits may be distributed in the form of dividends to the overseas shareholder without a further tax charge or withholding in the UK and the recipient may be entitled to a repayable tax credit under certain treaties.

An extended form of withholding tax, the Offshore Receipts from Intellectual Property (ORIP) tax, was introduced in April 2019 which applies to income arising from UK customers in connection with intellectual property but is taxed in a low tax country. Tax arises at a rate of 20% based on sales, not profits, and applies to groups achieving total revenue of £10 million or more.

DOUBLE TAX TREATIES
The UK has entered into more double tax treaties than any other country in the world. These double tax treaties cover such matters as residence status, permanent establishments, business profits, income from land and property, dividends, royalties and interest, personal direct and indirect income and capital gains. These agreements enhance the already favourable UK tax regime. HMRC maintains details of the UK’s Tax Treaties on gov.uk.

TRANSFER PRICING
The UK operates a universal system of transfer pricing in accordance with the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) guidelines so that all business transactions between connected parties need to be at arm’s length prices, not just those with persons abroad. It is the company’s responsibility to ensure that these rules are adhered to and that records are maintained evidencing and justifying the position taken.

There are potential exemptions for smaller and medium sized groups where they do not employ more than 250 employees and their group annual turnover/gross assets do not exceed EUR 50m/EUR 43m respectively. However, in practice these exemptions are extremely limited.

From 1 April 2023, companies with group consolidated revenue exceeding €750m will be legally required to maintain a master file which sets out the group’s business, nature of global operations and overall transfer pricing policies and its global allocation of income and expenditure activity. As well as local country files which incorporate details of material intragroup transactions for the local taxpayer for the year and supporting pricing analysis for each entity.
PERSONAL TAXES

RESIDENT/NON-RESIDENT STATUS
Since 6 April 2013, The UK has a statutory test for tax residence. To determine whether a person has sufficient ties to be regarded as UK resident for the relevant tax year, a number of factors are considered in conjunction with the number of days a person spends in the UK.

Someone who spends 183 days or more in the UK in a tax year will be automatically treated as tax resident.

NON-RESIDENTS OWNING UK PROPERTY
Special tax regimes apply to non-resident individuals, trusts and companies that own UK property (residential or commercial). These have been subject to significant change over recent years, with further changes since April 2019. Advice should always be taken in respect of ownership structures and the tax implications.

DOMICILE
Domicile is a legal status that the UK applies in determining liability to certain taxes. An individual acquires a domicile of origin when they are born, usually the domicile of their father. This can be displaced by residing in another country with an intention to stay permanently or indefinitely. There are advantages to retaining a foreign domicile even if an individual becomes a long-term UK resident.

INCOME TAX
Income Tax and National Insurance contribution (NICs) rates, and reliefs applicable to individuals, are set out in Appendix II. Salary (including benefits in kind), trading profits, dividends, investment and property income are subject to Income Tax at various rates, based on the income arising in the fiscal year ending 5 April. Employment taxes are collected at the time of payment. Credit will normally be given for withholding taxes suffered in respect of overseas income. UK property income paid to non-residents may be subject to basic rate withholding tax (unless an application is made with HMRC) under the non-resident landlord scheme for rents to be paid gross.

Higher rate tax on investment income and tax on profits of self-employment are normally payable by instalments due on 31 January in the fiscal year and the following 31 July. These instalments are based on the liability of the previous tax year and calculated at 50% each, with any outstanding balance of Income Tax due being payable on the following 31 January, together with any Capital Gains Tax due for that year. Instalments may be reduced or overpayments claimed as soon as the claim is processed and agreed with HMRC.

BENEFITS IN KIND
The provision by an employer to an employee (or their relative) of an asset (e.g. accommodation, furniture or a car) or other benefits (e.g. entertainment, domestic or other services, medical insurance, interest free or low interest loans) are taxable on the employee and give rise to employers’ NICs. Nevertheless, such benefits continue to play a significant role in attracting and retaining key employees.

CAPITAL GAINS TAX
Capital gains realised by individuals (see Appendix II) are subject to tax at a rate of either 10% or 20% (18% or 28% for residential property unless exempt as the individual’s principal private residence and carried interest). Gains are taxed after all reliefs and annual exempt amounts.
Provided the various conditions are met, Business Asset Disposal Relief, formerly known as Entrepreneurs’ Relief (ER), allows up to a lifetime limit of £1 million of gains on qualifying business disposals to be taxed at 10% and Investors’ Relief allows up to a lifetime limit of £10 million of gains on disposals of qualifying shares in an unlisted trading company to be taxed at 10% with the remainder subject to Capital Gains Tax at the prevailing main rate, currently 20% (2023/24 rates).

INHERITANCE TAX
Subject to certain exemptions, inheritance tax (IHT) is chargeable on the aggregate value of an individual’s estate at the date of his death, and on the value of any gifts and similar transfers of wealth made by him during the seven years prior to his death. Except in respect of gifts made in the seven years before death, no IHT is payable on gifts made during the individual’s lifetime if the gift is made to an individual. Gifts into trust incur tax at the lifetime rate of 20%, subject to certain exemptions. A UK resident and domiciled individual is taxable on his worldwide estate. For non-UK domiciled individuals only UK assets are chargeable (note that from 6 April 2017 the definition of ‘UK assets’ is extended to include indirectly held residential property).

From 6 April 2017 an individual is deemed to be UK domiciled for IHT and all tax purposes once he has been resident in the UK in 15 out of the 20 preceding tax years. In addition, special treatment applies for those with a foreign domicile who were born in the UK.

SALES TAXES/VAT

BASIS OF TAXATION
Most businesses must account for value added tax (VAT) on their sales of goods and services. Depending on the nature of the goods or services, they can be taxed in a variety of places depending where the supplier and customer are established, where the goods are located, where the services are performed or ‘used and enjoyed’, or where any relevant interests in land are situated. In addition, for cross border transactions, complex rules apply in many instances to determine whether the tax is payable by the supplier or the customer under the reverse charge provisions and whether a non-resident supplier is required to register for VAT in the UK. In accounting to HMRC for the VAT collected, a business is normally allowed to deduct the VAT it has accrued on expenditure, with some exceptions.

STANDARD-RATED OR REDUCED RATED SUPPLY
Most sales are subject to VAT at the standard rate of 20%. Some however can be subject to the reduced rate of 5%. It is important to charge the correct rate – failing to do this may result in HMRC issuing penalties and imposing interest charges. It can also be difficult to correct the error at a later date and there is a strict process to follow.

EXEMPT/0% RATED SUPPLY
A VAT-exempt business (e.g. in real estate or finance) should be contrasted with one where VAT is due at 0% (e.g. selling food, books, children’s clothing). No VAT is charged to the customer in either case, but the business can claim a repayable VAT credit if the sales are 0% rated, though not if it is exempt.

PARTIAL EXEMPTION
Where a business has activities that are both taxable and exempt for VAT purposes, it is partly exempt and must perform calculations for every VAT return to work out how much input VAT can be reclaimed. These calculations can be complex and are frequently challenged by the tax authorities. Although partial exemption is common across the European Union, the necessary calculations and legal obligations can be different in every EU member state.

VAT RETURNS

Returns declaring income, expenditure, VAT and movement of goods within the EU need to be completed frequently. All VAT returns and other declarations are now filed online and the UK authorities introduced a new electronic filing system (‘Making Tax Digital’) on 1 April 2019. Returns are normally filed on a quarterly basis, although some businesses can choose to file monthly or annual VAT returns instead. The VAT is payable at the same time, although certain businesses may be allowed or required to pay by monthly instalments or place a sum on deposit. Significant penalties and interest may be incurred for late or incorrect payments/returns.

Other forms of return may be required to declare the movement of goods into or out of the UK.

PROPERTY TRANSACTIONS

The VAT treatment of transactions in property can vary considerably. Sometimes they will be subject to the standard-rate VAT compulsorily or by election, whilst in other cases zero-rated, reduced-rated or exempt, with or without a credit for VAT paid on costs. This topic is extremely complicated with often significant sums at stake and the possible outcomes for suppliers and customers can be significantly different with complex interactions with other taxes. It is therefore beyond the scope of this report and specialist advice should be sought.

OTHER TAXES

CUSTOMS DUTIES

Customs import duties are levied on goods imported into the UK although goods originating in the EU can be imported without tariffs. Other reliefs may be available (e.g. inward processing relief). Import duty is chargeable on most goods including agricultural products, raw materials and manufactured goods. The rate of duty can vary. It is calculated by applying the relevant percentage to the value of the imported goods. HMRC have specific methods for valuing imports. Other things to consider include anti-dumping provisions to protect home markets: this can increase the duty payable.

Preferential treatment, and sometimes complete exemption from duty, is granted when goods are imported into the UK from certain countries such as members of the European Free Trade Association. The UK has many trade agreements with different countries worldwide.

Customs duties are often overlooked – businesses who import into the UK should take care to ensure that the import process is managed and that the correct amount of duty is being paid.

BREXIT

The UK left the EU with effect 1 January 2021 when the transition period ended. This means the UK is no longer part of the EU common customs area or single market for VAT purposes. The Trade and Cooperation Agreement with the EU introduces a number of simplifications intended to limit the damage to UK / EU trade. If you act as an importer of record for UK goods you would need a GB EORI number. You are likely to incur import VAT which can be recovered via your UK VAT return.
ONLINE TRADE
New rules came into effect 1 January 2021 which affect the sale of goods purchased online outside of the UK. For business to consumer sales with a value less than £135, the overseas seller must register for VAT in the UK.

There are also new rules of online marketplaces that must be considered. These result in joint and several liability for the online market place.

INWARD PROCESSING RELIEF
Inward Processing Relief (IPR) is where goods are imported into the UK from a destination outside of the UK to undergo some form of processing. On completion, the goods are re-exported to a destination outside of the UK. IPR works by relieving the importer from paying import VAT and duties on arrival.

The procedures to apply for IPR can be complicated because there are various authorisations. There can be significant cash flow differences between not paying the duty and VAT at all, as opposed to paying it initially and reclaiming it later. This regime is naturally controlled very tightly by the UK tax authorities.

BONDED WAREHOUSES
The bonded warehouses system may be used by importers of goods liable to customs and excise duties, to postpone payment of duties until goods are removed from the warehouse for UK use. Duty is not charged if the goods are re-exported from a bonded warehouse to a destination outside of the UK.

ENVIRONMENTAL AND OTHER TAXES
A range of environmental and other taxes are levied on different industry sectors such as Air Passenger Duty [APD], Insurance Premium Tax [IPT], Climate Change Levy [CCL], Landfill Tax, Aggregates Levy and others.

These are too numerous to be included in any detail in this report but advice should be sought to ensure that any legal requirements or obligations are met.

STAMP DUTY
Contracts for the sale or transfer of shares or securities, including the purchase by a company of its own shares, are subject to a rate of duty (0.5%) for every GBP 1,000 of consideration or part thereof.

STAMP DUTY LAND TAX (SDLT)
Conveyances or transfers of other property (e.g. land and buildings or related goodwill) are subject to various rates up to 12% based on the value of the transaction, nature of the property or the purchaser (see Appendix II). The standard residential property rate may be increased by 3% if additional residential properties are acquired which could increase the rate to a maximum of 15%.

Instruments granting leases over non-residential land or buildings are chargeable at 1% times the net present value of the rent over the whole term of the lease, including upward reviews, minus GBP 150,000. A licence, or tenancy at will, is exempt from SDLT.

COUNCIL TAX AND RATES
Local councils levy a charge on businesses occupying premises within their area, based on a notional value of the property, to fund local services including law and order, education, refuse collection etc. A single business rate is normally set for each fiscal year ending 31 March and the amount payable varies with the rate and the value of the premises.
Reduced rates are available for charities or unoccupied remises.

A similar system is in place for residential property.
7 – ACCOUNTING & REPORTING

The accounting regulations and disclosure requirements applicable to UK companies are extensive, detailed and complex. Except where otherwise stated, this guidance relates to businesses incorporated in the UK. The following is only a brief summary, and reflects the law as at May 2023.

APPLICABLE REGULATION

LIMITED COMPANIES
Limited (or incorporated) companies, including subsidiaries of parent companies incorporated outside the UK, are governed in the first instance by the Companies Act 2006 which includes provisions relating to:

- the maintenance and retention of accounting records,
- the maintenance of registers and minutes relating to directors and shareholders and their meetings,
- the form and content of annual accounts,
- the publication to shareholders and the public filing of annual accounts,
- the requirements for annual accounts to be audited, and
- voluntary and enforced corrections of unsatisfactory annual accounts.

The Act makes provision for various classes of company. The most important of these are:

- Public limited companies (plcs) – plcs are those companies authorised to issue shares to the public.
- Large, medium-sized and small, private limited companies – medium-sized and in particular small companies are subject to some exemptions from, and some simplifications to, the accounting requirements applicable to larger companies.
- Micro-entities – The UK permits very small companies that qualify to be treated as “micro—entities” to prepare highly simplified annual accounts.

LIMITED LIABILITY PARTNERSHIPS (LLPS)
Limited liability partnerships are governed in the first instance by the Limited Liability Partnerships Act 2000. Detailed regulations for accounting and reporting are similar to those for ordinary limited companies, but there are some differences.

OVERSEAS COMPANIES
Overseas companies are businesses incorporated outside the UK but operating within the UK through a branch or representative office, and not through a UK subsidiary company. They are also required by the Companies Act to register their place of business and to file annual accounts of the company (not the branch) with the Registrar of Companies.

OTHER BUSINESS STRUCTURES
There is no regulation directly governing the accounting practices of unincorporated businesses, such as sole traders or partnerships. However:

- Various aspects of tax legislation require that vouchers are kept for a number of years to support any required tax computations.
• Subject to any particular adjustments required by legislation, unincorporated businesses are taxed on profits determined on a ‘true and fair’ basis.
• Unincorporated businesses operating in some particular fields, such as the provision of investment advice, are subject to specific accounting and auditing regulations equivalent to those applying to companies.

ACCOUNTING STANDARDS
Public companies with shares traded on the London Stock Exchange, or on AIM or the Aquis Stock Exchange, are required to prepare their consolidated accounts in accordance with UK adopted International Accounting Standards (IAS). Other companies are also permitted to adopt IAS.

For companies and LLPs that have not adopted IAS, generally accepted accounting practice in the UK (UK GAAP) is determined by the Financial Reporting Council (FRC). Although most routine transactions and balances are accounted for in the same way under IFRS and under the UK GAAP, there are some differences.

PERIOD END ACCOUNTS
Every UK company registered under the Act is required to prepare a set of accounts that gives a true and fair view of its profit or loss for the year and of its state of affairs at the year end. Annual accounts generally include:

• A directors’ report (Large and medium-sized companies must also give a separate “Strategic report”)
• An auditor’s report
• An income statement (profit and loss account)
• A statement of financial position (balance sheet)
• A statement of other comprehensive income
• A statement of changes in equity
• A cash flow statement (not required for small companies)
• Comprehensive notes to the accounts (micro-entities give only the notes specified in the applicable accounting standard).

Most of these notes present in more detail the figures in the balance sheet, profit and loss account and cash flow statement. In addition, and where applicable, the notes to the financial statements may include:

• A statement concerning any significant doubts surrounding a business’ ability to continue as a going concern.
• Details of significant post balance sheet events.
• Details of material transactions with related parties including the directors.
• The identity of parent companies that prepare group accounts, and the ultimate controlling party of the company.
• For quoted companies, details of policies on, and exposures to, exchange rate, interest rate, liquidity and market value risks.

If a UK company is a parent company, consolidated accounts must also be prepared, although there is an exemption from this requirement for qualifying small private companies. In addition, in certain circumstances, if an overseas parent prepares and publishes group accounts that include the UK holding company, the UK parent can be exempted from preparing consolidated accounts for the UK sub-group.
Comparative figures should also be given for almost all items and analysis given in the year-end financial statements.

All of the above requirements apply equally to LLPs except that no directors’ report (nor any equivalent report) is required.

The accounts must be provided to each shareholder or member of a limited company or LLP, although there are regulations permitting a company to send only summary financial information to its members.

AUDIT REQUIREMENTS

The Act requires that the annual accounts include a report from suitably qualified, registered auditors to the shareholders (or members of an LLP) stating in particular whether or not, in the auditors’ opinion the financial statements: give a true and fair view of the state of the company’s [or group’s and of the parent company’s] affairs as at [date] and of the company/group’s [profit/loss] for the year then ended;

- have been properly prepared in accordance with United Kingdom Generally Accepted Accounting Practice; and
- have been prepared in accordance with the requirements of the Companies Act 2006
- the strategic and directors’ report (of a company) are consistent with the financial statements.

In appropriate circumstances, dormant companies, subsidiary companies and some small private companies (and similarly LLPs) may be exempt from the requirement to have their accounts audited (see Appendix III for further information).

Audits are nevertheless often required by:

- Providers of finance.
- Business owners preferring to obtain the assurance of an audit.
- Regulatory or trade bodies.

FILING OF THE ACCOUNTS

All limited companies and LLPs must place a copy of their annual accounts on the public record by filing them with the Registrar of Companies.

Generally, the filed accounts must be identical to those sent to the members - the ‘file what you prepare’ model, i.e. accounts filed at Companies House are the same as those prepared for the members. However, small companies can choose not to file the profit and loss account and/or the directors’ report, so-called ‘filleted accounts’.

The accounts on the public file must bear the manuscript signatures of a director (essentially to confirm that these are an accurate copy of, or extract from, the shareholder accounts).

There are time limits starting from the end of a company’s accounting reference period for the filing of the accounts with the Registrar of Companies. These are:

- for a public company – six months, or
- for a private company or an LLP – nine months.

Penalties are incurred when there is a breach of these time limits and directors may be prosecuted.

<th>2022/23</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Personal allowance GBP</td>
<td>GBP 12,570</td>
<td>GBP 12,570</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Personal allowances are reduced by GBP 1 for every GBP 2 that taxable earnings exceed GBP 100,000. In 2023/24, £1,260 may be transferable between certain spouses where neither pays tax above the basic rate.

INCOME TAX RATES AND BANDS

<td>GBP over 125,140</td>
<td>GBP over 150,000</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The higher rate threshold is frozen at £37,700 and the personal allowance is fixed at £12,570 for the years 2025-26 to 2027-28.

The additional rate threshold is lowered to £125,140 with effect from 6 April 2023 and fixed at that amount up to and including 2027-28.

There is an additional residence nil-rate band for main homes bequeathed on death of £175,000 (£150,000 in 2019/20). However, there is a tapered withdrawal of this amount where the total estate exceeds £2 million in value.
Lifetime chargeable transfers are payable at half the death rate, i.e. 20%.

Business property relief (BPR) stands at 100% for all shareholdings in qualifying unquoted trading companies and for most unincorporated trading businesses: 50% is available on other relevant business assets.

Agricultural property relief stands at 100% for qualifying holdings of agricultural land. The relief is limited to 50% in other cases.

*Individuals, certain trusts, personal representatives for year of death and two years thereafter.

The capital gains tax annual exempt amount reduces to £3,000 for 2024-25 and subsequent tax years.

Net gains after all reliefs and annual exempt amounts are taxed at 10% for basic rate taxpayers. Individuals in the higher and additional rate band and trusts are taxed at 20%. Higher rates (18%/28%) may apply to gains accruing on the disposal of interests in residential properties (where not exempt), and gains arising in respect of carried interest.

Gains qualifying for Business Asset Disposal relief (subject to lifetime limit on gains of GBP 1 million) or Investors' Relief (subject to a lifetime limit of GBP 10 million) are taxed at 10%. Gains in excess of the lifetime limits are charged at the main prevailing rate (20% for 2023/24).

APPENDIX III – ACCOUNTING THRESHOLDS

QUALIFYING FOR REDUCED OBLIGATIONS AS A SMALL OR MEDIUM-SIZED COMPANY

Certain disclosures and statutory exemptions are available to small and medium-sized companies. There are, however, a number of qualifying conditions that have to be met before a company can be classified as small or medium-sized, not just relating to size.

The size criterias, which have recently increased are shown in the table below. These are effective for periods commencing on or after 1 January 2016. At least two out of three of these conditions must be met in the year in question for a company to qualify as small or medium-sized, as the case may be. After a company’s size has been established (by reference to these criteria) the company does not qualify for any smaller category, unless it meets the more stringent criteria for two consecutive years. Similarly, a company does not move up to a new category until it has exceeded two or more of the thresholds for two consecutive years.

SIZE CRITERIA FOR SMALL AND MEDIUM-SIZED COMPANIES:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Condition</th>
<th>Small company</th>
<th>Medium-sized company</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Turnover</td>
<td>GBP 10,200,000</td>
<td>GBP 36,000,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Balance sheet total</td>
<td>GBP 5,100,000</td>
<td>GBP 18,000,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Average number of Employees</td>
<td>50</td>
<td>250</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

In addition, there are no exemptions available to a company which:

- is a public company,
- is an authorised insurance or banking company,
- carries out an insurance market activity or one of several other regulated financial businesses, or
- is, or was in the year concerned, a member of an ineligible group.

A group is ineligible if any of its members is a public company or a body corporate not registered under the Companies Act whose shares are traded on a regulated market (stock exchange) in the EU (for a small company) or anywhere (for a medium-sized company), or which carries out one of the regulated financial activities specified in the legislation.

AUDITING EXEMPTIONS

A small company, as defined by the limits above, is not required to be audited. Where the company is part of a group, the group as a whole must be “small” for the audit exemption to apply. Members with 10% or greater shareholdings may insist that an audit is carried out.

In certain circumstances, a subsidiary is not required to be audited if it is consolidated into the accounts of a parent that gives a public and binding guarantee of the subsidiary’s liabilities. As above, members can insist on an audit being carried out. The subsidiary must nevertheless prepare and file “true and fair accounts” and the auditors of the parent company may well require that some or even extensive audit procedures are undertaken in order to complete their audit of the group accounts.
APPENDIX IV – NATIONAL MINIMUM WAGE AND NATIONAL LIVING WAGE RATES

The National Minimum Wage is the minimum pay per hour almost all workers are entitled to by law. It varies depending on a worker’s age and whether they are an apprentice. Workers must be school leaving age or over to get the minimum wage.

简要历史

我们的100名合伙人和600名专业人员在英国的23个办公室工作。自我们成立以来的95年间，我们已经发展成为全国前20大会计师事务所之一。

在英国，你会识别出UHY Hacker Young Group的成员，因为我们在名字中使用UHY Hacker Young的名称，或者在我们的名字开头使用UHY。越来越多的全球其他成员也加入UHY国际网络。

与我们的办公室合作的好处：
我们的办公室网络使我们能够分享知识和解决方案，并保持在整个集团内的一致性。我们有能力做到灵活并确保我们总能为每个客户提供正确的解决方案。你可以放心，你会在我们办公室中得到最好的建议，并得到我们的全面关注。

每个办公室都支持其客户，为其提供全面的审计、会计和税务服务。在许多情况下，我们支持客户的业务和个人需求，提供从审计和一般业务建议到个人财务规划和税务建议的一系列服务。

访问专家技术支持 - 客户还从位于伦敦和曼彻斯特的技术中心受益，一些国家的顶级会计专家在那里工作。无论您是寻求国际税务规划建议、协助复杂增值税交易、指导筹款过程还是支持处于困境的业务，您都可以获得最佳的专门建议。

我们客户的价值：
我们倾听客户的问题和要求，并通过确保提供个性化、一对一服务的本地、区域和国家问题来做出回应。我们的服务基础是建立在牢固的纽带和长期的忠诚基础上的。我们拓宽的全球技能基础也使我们能够从更广阔的视角为本地和区域问题提供建议。
